A Food Service Transitional Story

By Caroline Musselwhite and Laurel Richardson

I had a bad day at work.

But it was a good day too.

First, I dropped some french fries.

Then, a pretty girl came in.

I dropped her burger.
It had lots of ketchup.

Next, another pretty girl came in.

I dropped her drink.
It was the biggest one.

Finally, another pretty girl came in.

I did not drop her french fries.

I did not drop her burger.

I did not drop her drink.

She asked me to sit with her on break.

I guess it was a pretty good day!

Good Day / Bad Day

Review

Re-read the story to find three things the worker dropped.

The worker in the story sure did drop a lot of stuff. Why do you think he kept dropping stuff?

This story talks about a pretty girl and a pretty good day. Which one do you think means “pretty” like “beautiful”?

a. pretty girl

b. pretty good day

Which one do you think means “pretty” like “sort of” or “kind of”?

Discuss

This story talks about dropped food that was not pretty. Think of a sentence that uses “pretty” or “not pretty”. Write the sentence or have a friend help.

Look at the written sentence (from above). Can you think of another word besides “pretty” that you can now use in your sentence?

Talk about a bad day
you had at work or school.

Talk about a good day
you had at work or school.

Did you ever have a day that was both bad and good like the worker in the story? Talk about it.
