Theodore Taylor

orn in Northern Carolina, Theodore Taylor began writing for his high school newspaper when he was 13. By 17, he worked for Washington D.C.'s Daily News as a copy editor. This job barely paid his bills. During the Second World War, Taylor worked as a seaman and later as an officer. His books demonstrate how he draws from these experiences and others to provide details to his characters and settings. Taylor typed his stories on an old typewriter, and even once said that he would like to die while typing new story.

Following the war, Taylor worked with Paramount Pictures. After the filming of Tora, Tora, Tora, began writing novels full time. The Cay won 19 literary awards. The award that Taylor is most fond of is The Lewis Carroll Shelf Award, because this award put The Cay on the same shelf as Alice in Wonderland His success didn't stop there, and some of his other numerous books for children and adults also became award winners.

Taylor loved receiving fan mail and personally wrote back to those who took the time to comment on his writing. He was happy to leave his small cluttered office on the coast of California to share his stories in classrooms, and encourage readers to find what they are good at and pursue it.

• Pierre Lalonde wrote Curação - A Photo Kit to Illustrate the Children's Novel "The Cay" by Theodore Taylor to reveal Curação's beauty and provide a visual for Taylor's novel.

- Taylor wrote the award-winning novel The Cay in only three
- Taylor was involved with the testing of two atomic bombs. This experience inspired the writing of his book The Bomb.
