INTRODUCTION

The Need for Practice

To be successful in today’s writing classrooms, students must deeply understand both concepts and procedures so that they can discuss and demonstrate their understanding. Demonstrating understanding is a process that must be continually practiced for students to be successful. Practice is especially important to help students apply their concrete, conceptual understanding of each particular writing skill.

Understanding Assessment

In addition to providing opportunities for frequent practice, teachers must be able to assess students’ writing skills. This is important so that teachers can adequately address students’ misconceptions, build on their current understandings, and challenge them appropriately. Assessment is a long-term process that involves careful analysis of student responses from a discussion, project, practice sheet, or test. When analyzing the data, it is important for teachers to reflect on how their teaching practices may have influenced students’ responses and to identify those areas where additional instruction may be required. In short, the data gathered from assessments should be used to inform instruction: slow down, speed up, or reteach. This type of assessment is called formative assessment.

Using the Practice Pages

The activity pages provide practice and assessment opportunities for each day of the school year. Teachers may wish to prepare packets of weekly practice pages for the classroom or for homework. As outlined on pages 5–6, each two-week unit is aligned to one writing standard. Note: Before implementing each week’s activity pages, review the corresponding prompt on pages 7–8 with students and have students brainstorm thoughts about each topic.

On odd weeks, students practice the daily skills using mentor texts. On even weeks, students use what they have learned in the previous week and apply it to their own writing.

Each day focuses on one of the steps in the writing process: prewriting, drafting, revising, editing, and publishing.

There are 18 overarching themes. Each odd week and the following even week focus on unique themes that fit under one overarching theme. For a list of the overarching themes and individual weekly themes, see pages 5–6.

These futuristic cars are decked out with tons of special cameras and sensors.

Computer-controlled cars can magically steer and brake all by themselves!

Thanks to this cool car, your hands and mind are now free to do other fun things.

The cars don't need drivers.

Some people like the cars and some don't.

The cars are being tested.

Directions: Write one question you have about driverless cars.

Using the Resources

The following resources will be helpful to students as they complete the activity pages. Print copies of these resources and provide them to students to keep at their desks.

Rubrics for the three genres of writing (opinion, informative/explanatory, and narrative) can be found on pages 208–210. Use the rubrics to assess students' writing at the end of each even week. Be sure to share these rubrics with students often so that they know what is expected of them.

NARRATIVE WRITING RUBRIC

Directions: Evaluate students' work in each category by circling one number in each row. Students have opportunities to score up to five points in each row and up to 15 points total.

Directions: Read the dialogue below. The word said is overused. Improve the text by replacing the numbered word said with synonyms. The first one has been done for you.

The Orion's cargo door slowly opened. A space vehicle sped down the ramp and onto the surface of Mars. Red dust flew everywhere.

“Mira, I’m on the surface cruising at the super fast speed of 5 miles per hour,” said (1) Archie.

“Yes, Archie! I read you loud and clear,” said (2) Mira.

“Mira! I just saw something move in front of me!” said (3) Archie.

“What do you mean you saw something move? You better not be joking,” said (4) Mira.

Archie wasn’t kidding. A small, green creature had appeared before his windshield. He was staring intensely at Archie.

“Mira, do you see what I’m seeing?” asked Archie nervously. Just then the creature disappeared.

“I don’t see anything, Archie,” replied Mira. “Are you okay, Archie?”

“I . . . I . . . I . . . think I just saw an alien,” said (5) Archie.

“An alien!” said (6) Mira. At that very moment, the same creature appeared in the window Mira was looking out. “Ahhhhh!” said (7) Mira.

“Mira! What is it?” asked Archie in a worried voice.

“That alien you saw is now staring at me,” said (8) Mira. “What should I do, Archie?”

“I’m heading back right now. I’ll be there soon,” replied Archie.

A semicolon can be used to join two closely related independent clauses instead of a conjunction. In most cases, you should not use a semicolon with a conjunction. That is the job of a comma.

NARRATIVE WRITING TIPS

Ask yourself . . .

Remember . . .

Am I the main character? Is the story told from my point of view?

You are in the story, telling where you are, what you see, who you are with, and what you do.

Does my story have a hook?

Include an exciting introductory sentence that makes the reader want to continue reading.

Does my story make sense and have a beginning, a middle, and an end?

Do not bounce around. Focus on a logical order of how the experience happened.

Am I using transitions to connect my thoughts and help the writing flow?

Use transition words like first, next, then, another, and finally.

Am I including rich details and sensory language to help paint a picture in the reader's mind?

Use lots of adjectives, and incorporate figurative language, such as metaphors and similes, to make your story come to life.

Does my conclusion summarize the main idea?

Incorporate a sentence or two that reflects on what you have written.

Have I used correct spelling, grammar, and punctuation?

Revisit what you have written. Then, check for mistakes.
